All set back there?

East-West Chapter Alberta Carriage Association vice president Roy McGinnis of Lloydminster and his passengers look back at the long train of horse-drawn vehicles and mounted riders lined up behind them as last Saturday's "drive or ride" event got underway. Elk Point's Iron Horse Trail staging area sign (left) was in place to greet the visitors, as were a half dozen sturdy new hitching rails.

"The reward is there," says mayor-elect

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

Parrish Tung is "excited and a little bit humble" after being elected as Elk Point's new mayor by acclamation.

"It will be a big task."

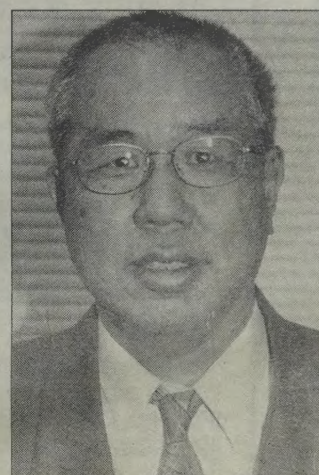

"I enjoyed being a councillor. That's the main reason I ran. The reward is there. In a small town, what we decide as a council affects our friends and neighbors. The smiling faces are our reward."

Tung served on many committees and spent his share of time in the rotating position of deputy mayor during his three years on council. As a full-time teacher at Heinsburg Community School, he doesn't feel he will be able to attend quite as many daytime meetings as the current Mayor Lyle Frisby, but "I expect my fellow councillors will step in to attend some of the meetings."

Tung sees town council as a cooperative effort. "I'm not a dictator, and decision-making will be through democratic process."

He says he takes "a common-sense approach" to issues, and is "totally approachable and a good listener. I always believe in listening to both sides. I'm not afraid to make decisions, but I like to know all I can about a matter before I decide."

Tung works on the principle of "it can be done, if I work at it. I believe in being positive."

Parrish Tung

Twenty-eight years as a teacher, dealing with students, 15 or 16 years on the lottery grant committee, and over 20 years involvement with the provincial sports association add up to a considerable amount of experience in dealing with people, their needs and wishes. Tung, who says he has "a good head for figures," is one of the negotiators for teachers with the local school board, and has 30 people working under him as volleyball officials in the area.

"Most importantly, I enjoy volunteering and just getting involved and helping people. It's its own reward," Tung says.

Thirty years for Elk Point and District Further Education

By VICKI BROOKER
Review Staff

Elk Point Further Education Council celebrated 30 years of success last Monday night when they were joined by four members of the original council for their September meeting.

Irene Miller, Margaret and Lawrence Modin and Sid Holthe were all charter members of the council, which held its first official meeting on January 8, 1974. Holthe was elected chairman, serving in that capacity until 1981, and Margaret Modin was elected as secretary-coordinator, a post she held until 1977. Council chairman Jim Hawkins welcomed "the veterans of this Further Ed council" and presented each with a small gift recognizing their efforts over the years on the council's behalf.

A history of the council, written by the late Anne Kates for Further Ed's 10th anniversary in 1984, was read by Hawkins. "With funding from the Alberta government and the cooperation of the County of St. Paul, who is our hosting authority, courses were started in the fall of 1974 through to the spring of 1975, with 14 courses instructed... In 1983, there were 46 courses taught with a total of 544.6 instructional hours and 486 people enrolled."

Holthe noted that from the beginning, "Further Ed took off, and is still doing beautifully."

Elk Point Further Ed coordinator Verona Lea Flanders and her Heinsburg counterpart, Marie Zayac, reported on the current season's courses. Flanders proudly showed off the glossy new brochures, which were done for the first time in conjunction with St. Paul Community Learning Association, and which unfortunately did not arrive in time for Information Night.

The council was pleased to see 16 courses on the Elk Point schedule, along with information on Elk Point Public Library, and three courses to be held in Heinsburg. St. Paul has 15 courses listed, and the council felt that the new combined listing would encourage people from both communities to sign up for the other community's courses.

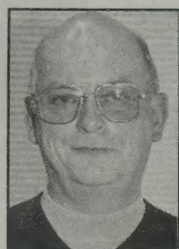

Flanders said the daytime quilting and "quilt 'til you wilt" were already underway, with the garden group getting underway the following evening and a willow wheelbarrow course coming up on the weekend. Oil painting, face painting and painting flowers on rocks are coming up in October, as are workshops on traditional Japanese Reiki. November's

The Fort George and Buckingham House Historic Site's visitor count may have been down this year, but it's full speed ahead on planning for next year's events.

Site manager Ross Stromberg says visitation was down, "but not too badly - not as bad as some of the other historic sites. We're down basically 300 from last year." He attributes the decline to prolonged bouts of cool, wet summer weather.

Forts staff kept busy on slow days by making mocasins and learning traditional crafts such as beading.

"All in all, we had a great year," Stromberg says.

The Fur Factor Challenge was a highlight of the season, and will be repeated next year. "But this time, we're going to have the kickoff events at the Canada Day breakfast, to stir up interest for the main competitions at the Forts on July 9," Stromberg says.

A good crowd enjoyed Saskatoon Pie Day, and this will be expanded into a Saskatoon Festival, with other activities related to the locally-grown berries, and scheduled for August 6.

The always-popular Forts des Prairies Jamboree has been set for August 28.

The grand finale of the 2005 season at the Forts is over a year away, but the Friends of the Forts are already starting to make plans for a gala Fur Trade Ball on Saturday, October 15, 2005. Funds raised at the event will go toward further enhancement of the site. The 2002 edition of that event was a tremendous success, with the money raised at that time used along with grant funding for the program area upgrade and gates and corner markings at the fort sites which were completed late in 2003.

Environmental Impact Assessment Report*Proposed Terms Of Reference

Canadian Natural Resources Limited ("Canadian Natural") is proposing to develop bitumen resources located in Townships 67 and 68, Ranges 2 and 3 W4M, approximately 55 km north of Bonnyville in Lakeland County. The proposed "Primrose East In-Situ Oil Sands Project" will utilize Cyclic Steam Stimulation (CSS) as the main resource recovery process. Expected production is 30,000 barrels of bitumen per day, over 25 years. The project will involve the construction and drilling of well pads and the construction of a 20,000 cubic meters per day steam generation facility.

This project will be fully integrated with Canadian Natural's existing operations in the Primrose and Wolf Lake area and will include expansion of the Wolf Lake Central Processing Facility located in Section 8, Township 66, Range 5 W4M, in the Municipal District of Bonnyville. The expansion will include increasing the bitumen processing capacity from 88,000 to 120,000 barrels per day and increasing the produced water treating capacity from 40,000 to 60,000 cubic meters per day.

The Director, responsible for Environmental Assessment, has directed that an Environmental Impact Assessment Report be prepared for this project. In the coming term, Tung and his council will be looking at infrastructure. "We need a three-year plan, so we will be prepared for any upcoming big expenditures."

Getting along with others is one of Tung's strong points, and he hopes to foster increasing cooperation between the Town and County councils concerning revenue sharing and joint issues.

"We should also strive toward a good relationship with the major employers. We should be working with them, promoting them and going into partnership with them. It's very important."

Tung hopes for population growth. "I feel if we promote the town in the right frame of mind, we can attract residents of surrounding areas, who will see it as an affordable place to live, to establish businesses and to do business."

"We should actively promote our local businesses, and work with them in a cooperative manner to attract more customers."

Staging area gets improvements

First there was the outhouse. If you attended Friends of the Forts meetings, you would know how important the provision of comfort stations is when you're operating any site that caters to travelers, tourists or visitors.

Then there were trail maps, first the colored version which included a multitude of facts about the Iron Horse Trail, and then the version created by the snowmobile club and giving a bird's-eye view of the whole region, section by section.

Then there were lots of suggestions and ideas, but things seemed slow. Travelers on snowmobiles, quads, horses and bicycles used the trail and enjoyed it, but staging area facilities in Elk Point consisted of the aforementioned outhouse and signs stating "Multi Use Trail" and "Snowmobile Staging Area."

This week things took a big jump forward. Our beautiful Iron Horse Trail sign is in place, along with half a dozen sturdy and attractive hitching rails. Lighting for the parking area is on its way we're told, and the snowmobile club is still working on obtaining a clubhouse which they'll happily share with us all. Ideas are coming thick and fast.

Let's keep up the momentum!

Mary Bennett of the Fort George - Buckingham House Restoration Committee explained the benefits of fort reconstruction at a Lakeland Tourist Association workshop on planning for tourism in the future. Alvina Shuhmacher, Stan Dmytrash, Gordon Fraser and Walter Lesyk campaigned for two Town Council seats in a by-election.

1989

For 20 hours, Elk Point residents thought they would be going to the polls in October, but one candidate withdrew, and the remaining six were declared elected by returning officer Pat Vincent, but within minutes, councillor-elect Mike Glover handed in his resignation, stating that he had inadvertently contravened the residency requirements. The Town received approval to fill their raw water reservoir from the North Saskatchewan River rather than from Hook Lake.

1994

Kristin Kittlitz took home 10 awards from F. G. Miller High School's awards night, with Charlene Anderson named best all-around student and Dawn Sommerville the top Grade 12 diploma student. Mayor Ed Buck called a by-election after the resignation of councillor Vern King, who was moving out of town, left only three members on Council, due to two resignations earlier in the year.

1999

Valedictorian Dawn Poisson accepted the Governor General's Award as F. G. Miller's Class of 1999 celebrated their commencement. She also accepted a number of awards at Awards Night, where Erica Nielsen was named best all-around student and Tessa Sakowski the top Grade 12 diploma student.

Autumn's bewitching spell of gold

I hope you have all been for a drive in the country and seen all the beautiful fall colours on the trees. We are so lucky to be in an area where there are many trees. What brings the beautiful colours to the leaves of the trees? Many folks think colder weather is what brings on the colour. There's even a legend that Jack Frost is responsible - creating the reds and purples by pinching the leaves with his icy fingers and adding yellow, gold and brown hues as he moves from tree to tree with his paintbrush on frosty nights. Scientists acknowledge that the onset of cooler temperatures is a part of the process. But a premature frost actually reduces autumn colour.

What really happens is that shorter days, in conjunction with cooler temperatures, signal the plant to prepare for winter, and the amount of chlorophyll in the leaves declines. Chlorophyll is the substance in leaves that enables trees to combine water, soil nutrients and carbon dioxide into the carbohydrates necessary for tree growth during the growing season. It also gives leaves their green colour.

from the FCSS desk

With all this knowledge of what makes the colour of leaves green and into the beautiful fall colours, I realize that the weather has not really cooperated with our summer growing season. Some crops are still green and some garden vegetables have frozen before their time of maturity. So I am afraid the fall colours may not be a happy time as it could be if the weather had been different. Basically we need summer before we can enjoy fall. Irregardless, there are beautiful fall colours to the leaves on the trees. I found a poem with the title: "Spell of Gold" by Elizabeth Symon of Shawinigan Lake, British Columbia. Enjoy.

Spell of Gold

What magic has now touched
The branches of the trees,
And changed green foliage
To golden treasuries?

It's autumn's alchemy -
In gardens bonfires blaze;
And see, the leaping flames
Turn golden in the haze!

Perhaps you, too, may find
Gold magic of your own.
You planted pumpkin seeds?
See how they've grown and grown?

At Halloween they'll glow
As lanterns by and by,
Or else be baked golden
At Thanksgiving for a pie!

"There's a legend that Jack Frost is responsible - creating the reds and purples by pinching the leaves with his icy fingers and adding yellow, gold and brown hues as he moves from tree to tree with his paintbrush on frosty nights..."

School board incumbent returned by acclamation

Division A incumbent Darrell Younghans was returned to the St. Paul Regional School Division board for a second term by acclamation.

Prior to his 2001 election to the board, Younghans served on Heinsburg's school council for "six or eight years before that. I didn't just jump in."

Issues facing the board this term are "division wide," Younghans says, and include shrinking enrollments for the small rural schools, which makes it difficult to keep those schools viable, and "bussing kids further and further."

On the plus side, Younghans says "funding looks good, we should be able to make it work. Also, there's a trend upward in academic standings, especially at F. G. Miller in Elk Point." However, he cautions, "we can't rest on our laurels. There's always room for improvement."

Younghans is "rather proud to be a part of [the improved situation]. The guy before me," MLA Ray Danyluk, "played a pretty big part. It made my job that much easier."

The newly reelected trustee "would like to see more parental involvement in schools, especially on the parent council end." However, he notes, "parental concerns must be low if there are only elections in two of the seven school board wards." With one newcomer elected by acclamation and current board member Shelley Dyck not running for reelection, Younghans says "we're guaranteed at least two new faces on the board. The more additions to the mix the better. You get more points of view that way."

September is "non-stop busy" at Elk Point Elementary

By Vicki Brooker
Review Staff

The first month of school has been "non-stop busy" at Elk Point Elementary School, says principal Lorne Young. "September is filled with finishing last year and starting a new one."

Enrollment has increased at the school, to the point where it allowed hiring a part time staff member, and Young has just hired a .6 teacher.

"We'll be splitting two large Grade 4 classes into three, and reshuffling internally to get the other .4 teacher," Young says. The transition was to take place yesterday.

The new staff member is no stranger to the school. Rolanda Beaudet filled in for physical education teacher Rob Boyd last year while he was on medical leave, and also taught Grade 3 here for two years. "It's good to have her back," Young says. "She's familiar with the school and its routines."

Young just received the provincial achievement test results for last year's Grade 3 and Grade 6 students, and says they're "consistently strong. I know we're above the divisional average in virtually all areas. The results are really good."

While 2003-2004 was "a really good year", Young says "we're looking at an even better one this year."

A new web-based computer program for marks and communication is in place, and presents "a big learning curve for the teachers."

All student marks will be entered into a computer program, which can be used to keep track of progress and print the results on report cards. Next year, Young says the program will be available to for parents and students so they can access their marks at any time.

Another new facet of learning is what Young calls "moral intelligence. Actually, it's not a new curriculum. We'll be teaching kids values, such as empathy and self-control, but it's incorporated into their other courses. We're intentionally imbedding little pieces of the program into the courses.

"We're going to try to keep these principles visible throughout the school as a reminder," Young says, "so it's constantly surrounding them. Also, we will all model what we teach."

Young says moral intelligence addresses concerns such as bullying and vandalism, and that this is "the very initial stages" of a long-term program. Seven members of the school staff have taken in-service training for the program, which Young says is also underway at Mallaig School.

The First Nations, Metis and Inuit support program (FNMI) is continuing this year across the school division, as is the focus on mathematics skills.

Young says maintaining literacy skills is "always a focus. It reflects on everything we do."

The school is "definitely always looking at ways of upgrading technology, and using it in existing courses," Young says. "We will have to continue to enhance that area."

Looking back at his first year at Elk Point Elementary, Young says "the support we have gotten from the parents and the community has been incredible. There hasn't been anything we couldn't work out." He notes that "parents maintaining contact with the school is not only expected, it's appreciated."

Four in the running in Division 1

By Vicki Brooker
Review Staff

Terry Krider
Heinsburg area resident Terry Krider is one of three first-time candidates vying for the Division 1 seat on County council on October 18.

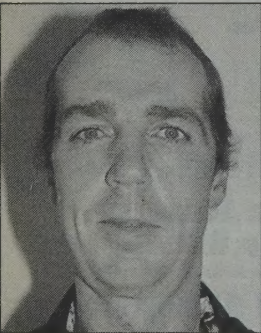

Krider is a part-time farmer with "a few cows" as well as a long-time county grader and snowplow operator.

"I'm fairly easy to get along with, and during my 22 years running the grader, I've talked to all the ratepayers from time to time. I get along with them well, so I decided to give running for council a try."

Krider has a major concern with the state of the oiled roads in Division 1. "We're getting behind on the oiled roads, because the county is concentrating on replacing the graders on a regular basis. If they didn't spend so much on the graders, they'd have money to fix the oiled roads."

He has heard "rumors that they might move the Heinsburg garbage dump. I don't think they need to contaminate another piece of land. There's lots of room there to move it back from the lake, if that's what's needed, there's a whole quarter there. Let's try to keep it all in one place."

Krider also sees a need for increased communication between councillors and ratepayers across the county, in order to deal with concerns and maximize the effectiveness of the council.

Glen Ockerman
Glen Ockerman owns and operates the third generation family farm in the Ferguson Flats area where he has lived all his life, and is also a first-time candidate.

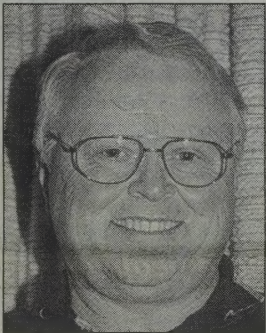

Ockerman feels he is approachable, and works well with others. He would bring "new ideas and a commonsense approach" to the county council. He has strong family values and is a staunch believer in community involvement. He is a willing worker who helps out the local community association and also volunteers his time to help out the Elk Point 4-H Multi Club. Ockerman was a member of the club as a youth, and feels 4-H plays an important role in preparing youths to be valuable citizens.

"I'm very aware of the problems in agriculture right now," Ockerman says. "I'm willing to work with other levels of government to address the situation. I'm also familiar with the oil-field in the area, and willing to work with them."

Ockerman wants "to make sure the county is looking toward the future," and would like to see the municipality stay out of debt as much as possible. He feels taking care of what is already in place is essential to prevent large expenditures in coming years. "They need to keep things maintained and keep the roads up."

He doesn't see a need for any "big changes" in county operations.

George Sanders
Semi-retired, George Sanders says he has "all the time in the world" to serve as Division 1 councillor. Sanders also ran in the 2001 election.

Sanders feels he is approachable and willing to serve, and has been encouraged by friends and neighbours to let his name stand for election.

"There's no particular issue on my agenda. That would depend on the electorate. I'd have to look at the issues as they come, and decide how to deal with them." Sanders is a good listener, and says "it pays to listen before you react."

Sanders has a wide perspective on rural concerns. "I've been in Europe, and have relatives there who are involved in local politics. I've seen how things went over there. They're about 20 years ahead of us, but their concerns will eventually be our concerns."

In making decisions for the county, Sanders says it is important to "look at the whole picture. If you don't, you're handcuffed. No one needs special rights, we all need to be equal here."

Sanders and wife Else operate a bed and breakfast near Heinsburg, and he's "110 percent for the Iron Horse Trail. It's brought us a lot of interesting visitors." Sanders has been involved with tourism for a number of years and feels the industry can have a very positive impact on the county's economy.

Darrell Younghans
Farmer and school board trustee Darrell Younghans decided to throw his hat in the Division 1 election ring because "I've had people approach me to run for about 12 years. I finally gave in."

Younghans says he's open-minded, and "hopefully my [school board] experience will help me some."

In the coming three years, Younghans would like to see the County pursue economic development. "With the BSE situation, if crude oil dropped to $20 a barrel we'd be in dire straits" because of the lack of other industry in the area.

"I'd also like to see fairer distribution of resource revenue," Younghans says, adding, "we can't just demand it, we have to get people to see our point."

Protection services, such as fire, ambulance and police are important to rural residents and will be increasingly important, Younghans says, "as the baby boomers become seniors. I hope we can come close to having the same services as they have in urban areas."

Younghans would like to see agricultural concerns "put first in policies and bylaws. We need to think about 'the right to farm.' It hasn't hit here too bad yet, but in some other counties, it's a big thing."

Running in a field of four candidates doesn't faze Younghans, who feels for the voters, "the more choices they have, the better."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Baumgardner, Kurek running in Division 2

Sharyl Baumgardner - Incumbent

Sharyl Baumgardner is seeking her second term on County council and feels she can offer voters the benefit of experience, hard work and fair representation.

Baumgardner feels one of her greatest accomplishments was the completion and paving of the Moosehills Road. She worked with oil companies to get their assistance in the upkeep of other roads in Division 2, and hopes to see continued improvements in road infrastructure.

Ensuring that health care continues to be available is a big issue for Baumgardner, who lobbied with the local health committee to keep the Elk Point Health Centre operating. She also "worked very hard" to improve seniors housing, including renovations at Buckingham House and improvements at Heritage Lodge. "Keeping and enhancing our health facilities is a necessity."

Cooperation with the Town of Elk Point would help the County "to manage our resources better." She feels "we really need to take a look at identifying future water sources. It's a big issue that will be on our plates soon."

Challenges to be faced include changing accessibility of funds for needed projects and maintaining roads on a stringent budget.

"I know there's more that I can do. I'm really looking forward to more accomplishments with the residents' input, which is very important," she concluded.

Tom Kurek

In the 2001 election, Tom Kurek was just one tie-breaking vote away from sitting in the Division 2 councillor's chair. This time, he's hoping for a wider spread in the vote count.

Kurek has worked for the county as a grader and snow plow operator for almost 23 years, so has first-hand knowledge of the condition of the division's roads. He says roads are "only 10 percent of the issues" facing the county,

"but they're the first thing you hear about." He wants to see the oiled roads kept in good condition, "but with the cost of oil these days, there's talk of turning them back to gravel." Heavy oilfield truck traffic makes keeping the roads in repair an even greater challenge, Kurek says.

"I totally realize that there are other areas of concern," and if elected, Kurek plans to work with council "to work all that out."

Good communication among council members is very important, Kurek feels. He says "if you don't get them on side, you can't make anything fly."

Although Kurek says "I don't like to make promises," he does assure voters that he plans "to be approachable at any time, both before and after the election."

Retired teachers and their guests warmly welcomed Marshall Kachmar (far left) to their September meeting, held at the Elk Point Seniors Recreation Centre.

Retired teachers annual meeting

By Lily McCool

NEARTA

The North East Alberta Retired Teachers' Association held their annual general meeting on Tuesday, September 21, 2004 at the Elk Point Senior Citizens' Centre. Vice-President Bill Callas conducted the business meeting and presented a report on matters being dealt with by ARTA. These include extended health benefits, insurance, and with the increased membership of ARTA, our provincial parent organization, the need for a new Governance Model with revised constitution and by-laws. ARTA is in contact with government agencies and works closely with other organizations such as the Alberta Council on Aging for the betterment of seniors' lives and interests.

Officers elected for the coming year are: president: Bill Callas of Cold Lake vice-president: Armand Laing of St. Paul, secretary: Joyce Nesimiuk of Glendon, and treasurer Lorraine Kwiatkowski of St. Lina. Delegates to attend the ARTA AGM on our behalf are Ann Lemay of Lac La Biche and Armand and Alice Laing of St. Paul.

After the business meeting, we enjoyed a noon lunch. The highlight of our gathering was a very informative and enjoyable talk by Marshall Kachmar as he guided us through a tour of the Ukraine.

By holding our meetings in different communities, we get to meet new people and sample different aspects of Alberta which many of us would otherwise miss. At these meetings also, we have opportunity for fellowship with our former colleagues, a truly enjoyable experience. Therefore we invite all retired teachers from North Eastern Alberta to attend NEARTA meetings, held four times a year at various locations. Our next meeting is scheduled for Bonnyville at 11 a.m. on December 8. Members will be reminded a week before by telephone and given the exact location. If you are a prospective new member, ask another retired teacher in your community for details, or phone President Bill Callas, at 594-5144.

Armchair travelogue for retired teachers

By Vicki Brooker

Review Staff

Elk Point resident Marshall Kachmar took North East Alberta Retired Teachers on an exciting armchair tour of the Ukraine at last week's NEARTA meeting. Kachmar, a fourth generation Ukrainian Canadian, and his wife traveled to the land of his ancestors this summer, and brought back ten hours of video tape, an album filled with photos, and unforgettable memories of their two week journey. The capitol city of Kiev is "being upgraded for tourism," Kachmar said. "There are new filling stations everywhere. What impressed me most was the lush trees. They make the air easy to breathe, and sweet." He said Kiev is known as "a city in a garden" and for good reason.

St. Andrew's Cathedral, the gold domes of 11 churches converted by Stalin into a museum, the claustrophobic monastery built in caves, and an underground World War II museum where a guillotine "gave me the shivers" were all part of the tour, as was the titanium Friendship Arch and a statue of the iron maiden.

"The sad part was Chernobyl Museum. It's a sad place. The disaster happened at night and the next day was a holiday with all the kids outside playing," not knowing the effects of the escaped radioactive material which left 70 towns off limits and unsafe for habitation.

Marianski Palace, the Ukrainian equivalent of the White House, but only used for state visits and entertaining, has floors handmade from the hardwoods of the Ukraine and a beautiful state room all of gold with glittering chandeliers, Kachmar said.

A cruise on the Dneiper River was "a nice way to end our visit" to Kiev.

An all-day trip took them to Lviv, across agricultural land growing malt barley, wheat, buckwheat and sugar beets. Little villages along the way had bus shelters where seniors, called "pensioners" there, waited for free rides on rickety buses.

The highlight of Lviv was a 200-year-old cemetery noted for sculptures and headstones made by gifted craftsmen, the city square, one of the grandest opera houses in the Soviet Union, and St. George's Greek Catholic cathedral.

A trip over the Carpathian mountains took them to wooden church 328 years old, Kachmar said, and to the Slovakian border, where they saw guards with intimidating guns. A grape-growing area utilizes wine cellars built into the volcanic rock. "People are poor in the Carpathian Mountains," Kachmar said, and many had roadside stands set up to sell their produce.

The tour also visited the Transcarpathian and Bukovinian regions.

Kachmar said he would "recommend a trip to the Ukraine anytime."

He invited everyone to stop in at Heritage Lodge any Friday in October, starting at 1:30 p.m., to watch a two-hour portion of his travel videos.
